Farewell Seniors

Brooke Franco

As the end of the school year approaches, the class of 2014 are getting ready to say their last goodbye's to high school and hello to reality. Many will be embracing their last few days as they start to prepare for college life.

Some of the biggest events in someone's life happen during high school. People will have their first high school dance, Friday night football games, competitions and many more. All the seniors have left to take with them is their precious memories from the four years of high school.

"Prom was my favorite memory. It was nice seeing everyone dressed up and have a good time," senior Juana Reyna said.

Leaving high school means changing their daily routine and not attending normal high school activities.

"I'm going to miss going to the basketball games. They were always fun to go to with my friends," senior Brandy Wolf said.

When the door closes from high school, another door opens to college. The high school seniors will become college freshmen as they start a new chapter in their life and strive to achieve their goals.

"I'm going to go to the Art Institute of Houston to become a chef," senior Victoria Metts said. "My goal is to open my own restaurant,".

With a diverse senior class, not every graduate will follow the same career and study paths.

"I plan to go to Austin College for Mechanical Engineering or Physics. I want to either get my private pilot license, train people to fight or be a commercial pilot," senior Jake Williams said.

While high school is coming to an end for the class of 2014, seniors flashback to their greatest memories of high school. When they walk out the door for the very last time, they take one step closer to the rest of their lives.

Powering Through Powder Puff

The Class of 2016 swept the Powder Puff tournament by eliminating the freshman team and then demolishing the class of 2015. Sophomore Kaylee Derossett scored all nine touchdowns for her team.

"It was a great time," Derossett said. "I scored nine touchdowns and it felt good winning it all."

Even though the Class of 2015 fell in the championship game, they were in great spirits as they scrambled to put a team together at the last minute.

"We didn't have that many players at first," junior Megan Brantley said. "When the first game got canceled, it actually helped us because more girls were able to play."

Powder Puff empowers the girls to show off and have fun for the benefit of their class.

Top 10% Breakfast. Seniors take one last look

Damon Fullington

Monday May 19th, the top ten percent had their annual breakfast. An annual tradition, the top 10 percent of the senior class meets, eats breakfast, and reminisces their past four years of high school.

"It was a lot of fun, they had tasty doughnuts," said senior Brittney Wise.

The breakfast also had a presentation of photos, quotes and favorite memories shared by the class of 2014.

"It was really nice hearing about what everyone is doing after high school," Wise said, "seeing where we've been, to where we are now."

The shared attitude of bittersweet memories was shared through the student body.

"It was good but very bittersweet watching all my classmates grow up in the past four years", senior Espy Harper said, "it's so real".

Panthers Roar at Last Dance

Taylor Tanner

Prom is a monumental event for every high school student. Girls and guys plan ahead to prepare for every aspect of it, from dresses to dinner. This year, the dance was 1920's themed. The height of classical style and flashy dress were embodied by Caney Creek students on the night of May 17.

"My favorite part was just being able to have a nice night with friends," senior Victoria Amyx said.

The annual prom dance is a tradition that originated in the 1800's. Popularized in the 1950's, prom carries many traditions that are still observed today.

"My date brought me a flower corsage that I wore on my wrist," junior Erin Wood said. "It matched his boutonniere."

Pictures with dates and family are also a prom custom; one that mothers and fathers drag out with varying poses and positions.

"I took pictures with my mom, my dad, and my boyfriend before prom," senior Samone Lindgram. "I also have pictures with just him and I."

Prom 2014 was held at the Lone Star Convention and Expo Center, providing plenty of room for dancing, DJ's and even a car.

"They had this red, old-fashioned car that was really cool," senior Danielle Imai said. "It was roped off so no one touched it, but it really fit the theme."

For most, prom was more than just a chance to dress up and have a night out. Prom marked the true end of their experience as a high school student.

"It was the last time we could really see each other and it wasn't just the awkward passing in the hallways," senior Rebecca Lowe said. "There was a sincere and genuine happiness to see each other and hang out. This was the last time to really let loose and be ourselves. The night ended way too soon."

This year's newspaper staff consisted primarily of seniors, but what are their favorite memories or plans after graduation?

Senior Damon Fullington has been on newspaper staff for two years and is currently Editor in Chief.

"My best memory is definitely distribution days back when I was new," said Fullington.

Many of the students actually plan on having a career in the Journalism field after they graduate from high school and college.

Francisco Amaya is the sports editor for The Prowler. He has been on staff for three years. He plans on majoring in Journalism and Communications.

"My favorite memory would have to be when we found out that we were getting a new teacher." Amaya said.

Taylor Tanner, the third senior on staff, has been in newspaper for two years and is currently copy editor for The Prowler.

"My favorite memory of newspaper were the UIL trips," Tanner said.

Tanner plans to attend the University of Houston and study Psychology.

The Prowler Staff would like to wish them good luck...you will be missed.
