Welcome Back School Is Now In Session

Students returned to school Monday, August 25 with the challenges of the new school year ahead of them.

"It feels good to be back, I just have to remember how to write," junior Brady Bruce said.

The first day of school always brings a nervous feeling along with the excitement of the new year. After a long summer of not being with friends, the first day is a great chance to catch up with the friends you didn't really get to talk to all summer.

"It feels good knowing I can see all my friends that I didn't over the summer," junior Brandon Coon said.

With school comes the struggle of waking up early every morning after not having to do so during the summer.

"Yeah, I really didn't prepare to have to wake up early," junior Damian Hem said.

Some of the time it can even take a little extra effort to wake up. The average alarm just can't get the job done.

"My mom had to wake me up!" junior Craig Keuchel said.

For school, students also have to get back in the groove with homework and studying. A whole summer of free time can make getting back to study time hard to do.

"I don't like it, but I'm still trying to adjust," junior Gavin Ritch said.

Every student is hopeful to get the classes they want but that isn't always the case. Senior Ana Garcia was placed in a class she didn't really like to accommodate her schedule.

"I was placed in PhotoJ instead of being an office aide, but because of my other classes I didn't have a choice," Gracia said.

Most students are happy with their schedules and hope to have a great school year ahead.

“It’s really hot with the blistering sun right in front of your face!” junior Color Guard Captain Kaitlen Kennedy said.

The Texas heat didn’t keep anyone from practicing this summer. With record temperatures of over 100 degrees many students still had to rehearse from 8 to 4 every single day of the week. Organizations like football, colorguard and band have practiced since July.

Even though many say the sun can be irritating this doesn’t stop Kennedy from learning new techniques that she can carry with her for years to come.

helped me learn leadership skills” Kennedy said.

The football team has also been preparing to show this season’s football crowd their school spirit. With record temperatures throughout the summer each team member is finding out how the heat affects them individually.

“The heat just makes you tired” senior varsity football player Jay Lundquist said.

The Panthers have stood up to the pain of the heat to gain the skills necessary to be successful this football season. This “no pain, no gain” attitude has made the football team have to

Getting There

Josh Christenberry

As you may have noticed throughout the hallways, the location of many of the classrooms has changed. As opposed to last year when the classrooms were grouped together according to grade, the rooms are now placed by subject. A lot of students think that the new placement is good for nothing other than causing confusion, while others believe that this order is just common sense.

This new system was put into place to help all the teachers of the same subject have an overall more convenient way to work together and make improvements to the way they work and educated their students.

Despite the reasoning, several students still disagree with the layout.

“I think it’s pretty lame,” junior Loren Barrera said. “Upperclassmen are crowded with freshmen who don’t know where their classes are yet and a lot of times it makes upperclassmen look bad for showing up to class late because they couldn’t get around everyone fast enough.”

On the other hand, some feel the changes do not affect them very much.

“It doesn’t really bother me at all,” senior Hunter Cook said.
